VESSELS KNOWN HERE.

Heidritter, Victim of North Carolina
Storm, Was the Herald.

Shipping circles at this city are interested in the fate of the schooner Annie R. Heidritter, which, with rudder broken and spars gone, was reported drifting on the North Carolina coast. The cutter Seminoe has gone to her aid and it is thought she will be saved and towed into port. The Heidritter was an infrequent visitor here, but was well known on the Chesapeake. She was formerly the schooner Herald, which, after unloading asphalt here, went to Baltimore to load coal. While loading at the coal piers a fire occurred and the vessel was badly damaged. She was sold as she lay and her purchasers had her raised and rebuilt at Sharptown, Md., shipyard and when she was put overboard in 1910 she was given her present name. The Heidritter is owned at Newark, N. J., and is a vessel of 904 gross tons register. She is 186 feet long. The big six-masted schooner George W. Wells, one of the Coastwise Transportation Company fleet of Boston, another victim of the Wednesday hurricane, which wrecked her three miles north of Hatteras Inlet on the North Carolina coast, was also an old trader to the Chesapeake, but recently has been employed in running ties from south Atlantic ports to Boston.

Sons of Jonadab.

A meeting of Hope Council, No. 1, Independent Order of Sons of Jonadab, was held Friday night at its rooms at 5th and G streets northwest. One candidate was admitted to membership. Several of the members made addresses. Unity Council met Wednesday evening and considered plans for extending the work in the northeast section of the city. Addresses were made by S. D. Tennyson, Philip Webber and A. Archambault. Six new members were admitted last night at a meeting of John C. Daly Council, held at the rooms, 643 Louisiana avenue northwest.

Overcome by Heat at Market.
Mrs. Myrtle Fitzsimmons, twenty-eight years old, a resident of Capitol Heights, suffered an attack of heat exhaustion yesterday afternoon while at Center market. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

VESSEL BUILT BY PIRATES.

Mahogany Schooner Matchless, in Coast Survey Service, Repaired.

Repairs to the coast survey service schooner Matchless, one of the oldest and the only sailing craft in the service, has been completed at a Baltimore shipyard, and the schooner, under the command of Capt. O. W. Ferguson, has sailed for the Elizabeth river, Va., to resume survey work. According to report, the Matchless is a vessel with a history such as no other vessel in government service has. She, it is said, was built in 1850 by pirates using one of the isolated keys of the West Indies as their headquarters, and the material for the construction of the schooner was secured from the cargo of a ship, which, laden with mahogany, had been lured to her destruction by false signals displayed by the pirate chief and his outthroat followers.

The material was taken to Key West and there the pirates had it worked into shape for the schooner, and when it was taken back to the island the vessel was built. The stern post, timbers and other parts of the hullless are of this stolen mahogany and are as sound today as when first put in the vessel over a half century ago. On the completion of the schooner she was used in the slave trade and carried many cargoes of blacks between Cuba and the southern states. She is said to have carried the last cargo of the kind that ever entered a southern port. Soon after the civil war the United States purchased the schooner from private parties, and she has been in the coast survey service since that time.

Killed by Kick of Horse.

Special Dispatch to The Star.
HINTON, W. Va., September 6.—Dr. J. W. Ford was killed yesterday by his horse kicking him in the forehead. He returned to his home from Talbot, ten miles east of Hinton, and was watering the animal, which got tangled in a hoop. Badly frightened, the horse kicked the doctor, who died two hours later.
